As the incidence and prevalence of blood lead poisoning increases, several trends are being recognized. It has been determined that the best approach to management is prevention. Disparities and state specific information will be shared as well. In addition, the current management of blood lead levels as provided by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) will be presented in order to compel providers to “get it right,” so thousands of children will get “appropriate services” in a timely way, therefore optimizing their outcomes.
