October Celebrate Indigenous Pink Month

Indigenous Pink Month is a national breast cancer awareness campaign for American Indians and Alaska Natives (AI/ANs). Breast cancer is the most commonly diagnosed cancer and second leading cause of cancer death for AI/AN women. When it comes to detecting breast cancer, timing matters. Regular screenings can find breast cancer early when it is easier to treat.

The goal of Indigenous Pink Month is to educate all indigenous people on the importance of early detection and remind everyone to keep up to date on their screenings. The American Indian Cancer Foundation (AICAF) asks men and women of all ages to take part in the activities listed below throughout the month of October.

October 9, 2018 - Webinar: Abnormal mammogram: Now what?
12:00 PM CST, Register HERE

October 18, 2018 - Facebook & Instagram

Wear pink.

Wear pink to honor breast cancer warriors and survivors and to spread awareness.

Share.

Share a picture of yourself on social media wearing pink using #IndigenousPink.

Tell your friends and family about Indigenous Pink Day and ask them to wear pink and join in on the social fun. Organize Indigenous Pink Day at your workplace. Ask leadership to encourage all employees to take part.

Get screened.

Talk to your health care provider for advice and information on breast cancer screenings. Breast cancer in American Indians and Alaska Natives can be prevented through regular screening and awareness.
